900 19th Street NW is a 15,966-square-foot Class A office asset in the nation's capital. The property, owned by Tishman Speyer, offers tenant amenities such as a fitness center, car charging station, conferencing facility and bicycle storage.

The prime location, recent renovation and tenant perks is what grabbed the attention of CWCcapital in their search for a new location to lease. "The location checked all the boxes in an exhaustive search process and was the culmination of a truly collaborative effort," said John Schlegel, Executive Vice President of Occupier Solutions at Transwestern.

Transwestern brought in the Construction Management team during the selection process to provide feedback on sites, which saved time and ensured all the client's goals were met.

James Shevlin, President and COO of CWCcapital, shared, "We are confident our centrally located, bright, efficient space will continue to help us attract and retain top talent in the commercial real estate industry."

"This new, top-floor space in this recently renovated building maximizes space efficiency and puts CWCcapital near a young, talented workforce."
